DHL International

Please be aware that there may be charges of £15 for remote area deliveries. It is the Customers responsibility to ensure that they check the postcode in the following link to see if it is applicable for that delivery; <http://raslist.dhl.com/jsp/first.jsp>

Charges for International Parcels are all based on the weight of the overall consignment. The weight used for charging will be the greater of either the total weight entered or the volumetric weight calculated using the dimensions of the product. Here is the link for the International volumetric calculator. http://www.dhl.co.uk/en/tools/volumetric_weight_express.html.

Other surcharges that may apply:

- Over weight Pieces – A consignment with a weight of 70kgs or greater will attract a £20 per shipment charge.
- Out of Gauge – An additional surcharge for items with a length of between 120cm and 240cm. £15 per shipment.

DHL Europe by Road

Fuel Surcharges

Carriers adjust the surcharge in line with the most suitable measure of diesel prices. The surcharge is linked to the consumer price in Sterling (GBP) of diesel fuel inclusive of duties and taxes, as measured by the European Commission Directorate General for Energy and Transport.

All Domestic services currently attract a 6% fuel surcharge (from the 05th July 2010) any changes to this charge will be advised on your invoice.

Europe by Road has a 15% fuel surcharge. Changes will be advised on your invoice.

International Air services fuel surcharge is currently charged at 16%. This figure changes month on month.

For any services that are based on weight where a later invoice is raised for discrepancy in the actual weight, the fuel surcharge is based on the overall actual weight of the consignment. For example if the weight is declared as 20kgs and the actual weight is 25kgs, you will be charged the additional 5kgs in a separate invoice together with the required fuel surcharge on the additional weight.
